

BIO: Lisa Holzman Marciano, Late-Life Safari

Lisa Holzman Marciano is a resident playwright for the Santa Barbara Community College's continuing education drama courses. Over 25 of her one acts have been produced and provided free to the public. Lisa is a storyteller whose plays explore family, identity, and human connection through humor and heart. Her plays often focus on intimate, character-driven stories that balance sharp dialogue with emotional truth. Drawn to contemporary themes and Black-Box settings, Lisa writes pieces that invite audiences to laugh, reflect, and reconsider what defines family and belonging. Lisa's scripts have been finalists in playwriting festivals from California to New York and across the "pond." Lisa is a kidney transplant recipient of 36 years and is incredibly grateful to her donor. Isn't life a curious adventure?
