

Rick Butts, Canadian playwright

As a professional speechwriter for about thirty years, Rick has had a long career standing in the wings watching other people tell the stories about themselves that he wrote for them. Then he quit that gig and returned to his first love as a writer: writing for the theatre.

Rick has degrees in English literature and drama from McGill University (Montreal) and University of Toronto and studied professional acting at the Banff School of Fine Arts (Banff, Alberta). He is a member of the Playwrights' Guild of Canada and writes plays for theatre and radio. He is from Newmarket, Ontario.

The playwright's website is www.rickbutts.ca.
